

Asian Studies in the Era of Open Science

September 3

AAS in Asia at Kobe University

Yumi Kitamura

Kyoto University

Background of this Panel

- Changing dynamics of research in humanities and social sciences with the rapid increase of accessibility to both historical and contemporary resources online.
- Huge demand for the promotion of Open Science under the COVID-19 pandemic.
- Challenges to shift from the Open Access to the Open Sciences.

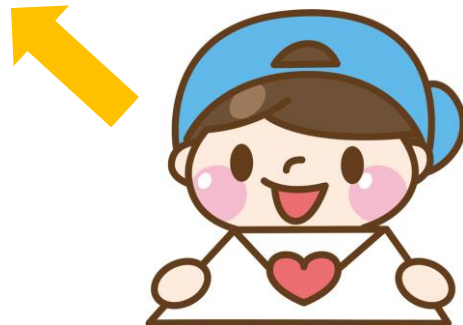

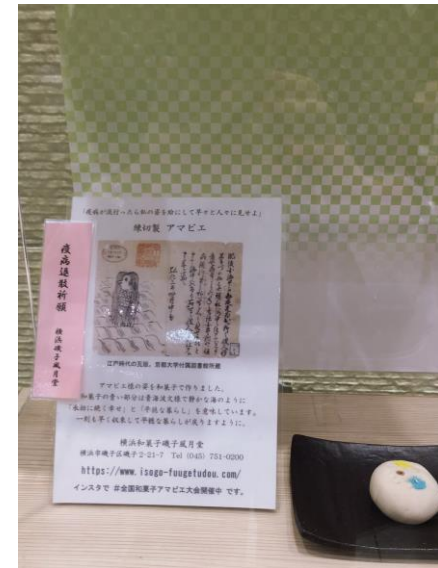

Impact of Open Science beyond Academic Society

Amabie (1848) Shinbunbunkoe
Photograph courtesy of the Main Library,
Kyoto University

At Sogo Department Store in Yokohama (May, 2020)
Photograph courtesy to Ms. Nishioka

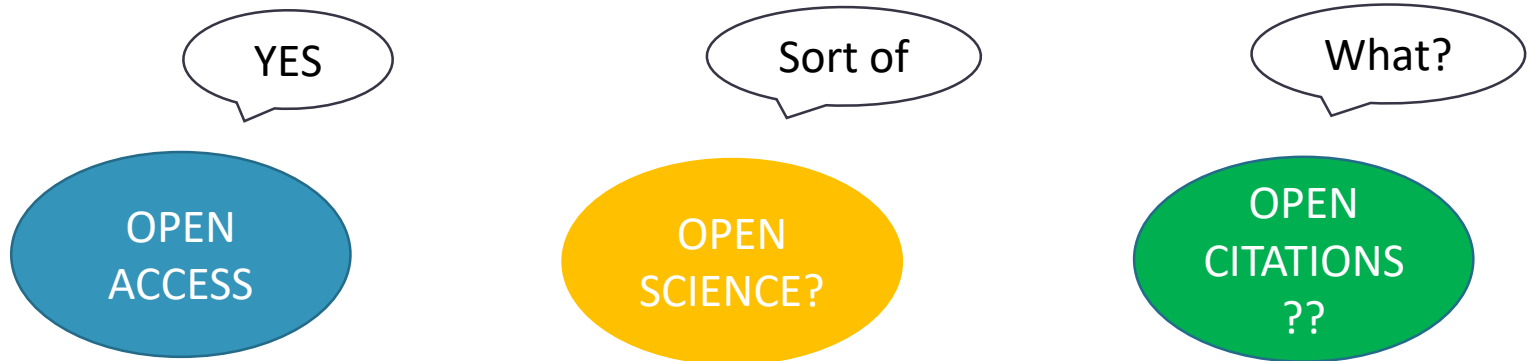

Purpose of This Panel

- Discuss the challenges in promotion of Open Sciences in Asian Studies through the sharing of current practices.

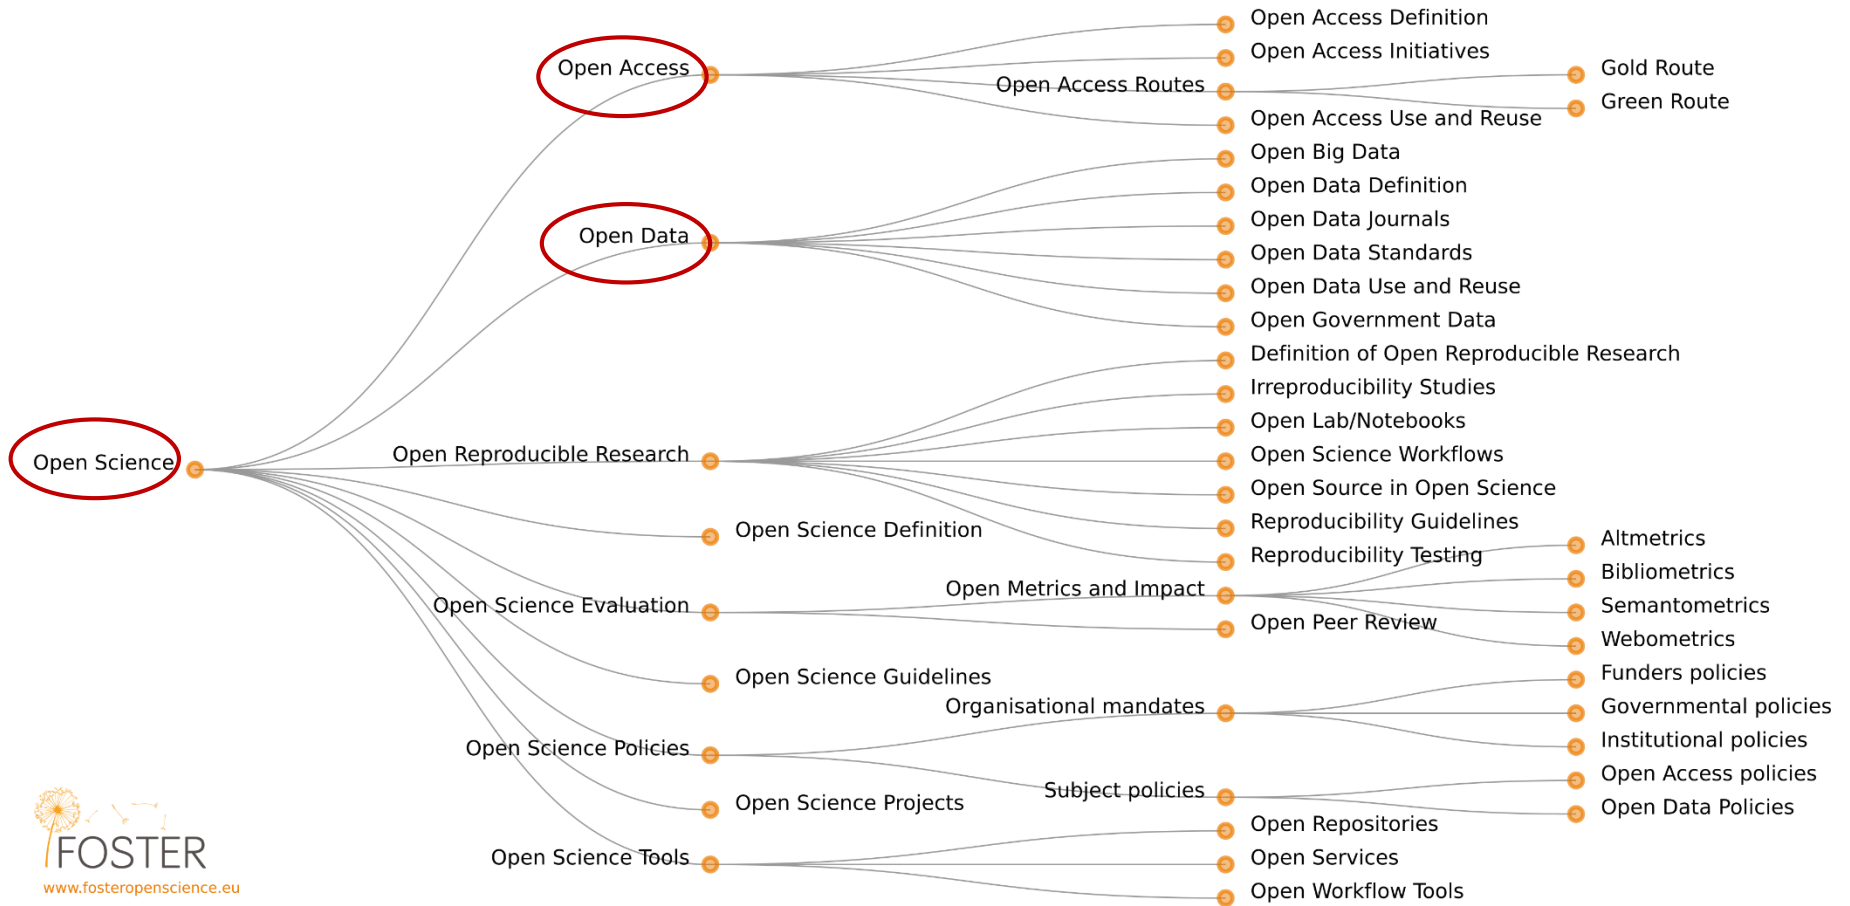

Contents of Panel

1. Promoting Open Science Movement of the East Asian Studies;
On “Open” Strategies of the KU-ORCAS
by Dr. Nobuhiko Kikuchi
(Kansai University Open Research Center for Asian Studies)
2. Buddhist Studies with Open Science: An Attempt in Asian Studies
by Dr. Kiyonori Nagasaki (International Institute for Digital Humanities)
3. Open Citation for the Development of Asian Studies
by Dr. Chifumi Nishioka (Kyoto University Library)
4. To Advance the Publication of Open Citation Data: What Can/Should Editors of Small-scale Journals do?
by Ms. Narumi Sitara
(Center for Southeast Asian Studies, Kyoto University)

Open What???

Open Science Taxonomy

From the website of FOSTER

【URL:<https://www.fosteropenscience.eu/foster-taxonomy/open-science-definition>】

(Accessed on September 2, 2020)

What Does OPEN Mean?

Rights

Access

Use

Transparent

Participatory

Enabling Openness

Philosophically Aligned with Open Principles

Emphasis of Each Presenter on Various Aspects of “OPEN”

1. Promoting Open Science Movement of the East Asian Studies;
On “Open” Strategies of the KU-ORCAS
by Dr. Nobuhiko Kikuchi
(Kansai University Open Research Center for Asian Studies)
 Participatory
2. Buddhist Studies with Open Science: An Attempt in Asian Studies
by Dr. Kiyonori Nagasaki (International Institute for Digital Humanities)
 Use
3. Open Citation for the Development of Asian Studies
by Dr. Chifumi Nishioka (Kyoto University Library)
 Enabling Openness
4. To Advance the Publication of Open Citation Data: What Can/Should Editors of Small-scale Journals do?
by Ms. Narumi Sitara
(Center for Southeast Asian Studies, Kyoto University)
 Participatory

We appreciate your comments and suggestions!