<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>タイトル</th>
<th>国際研究集会案内</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>作者(followed by the names of authors)</td>
<td>西洋古代史研究</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>引用源(Citation)</td>
<td>Acta academiae antiquitatis Kiotoensis = The Kyoto journal of ancient history (2016), 16: 81-83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>発行日(Issue Date)</td>
<td>2016-12-12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>URL</td>
<td>http://hdl.handle.net/2433/217646</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>タイプ(Type)</td>
<td>Departmental Bulletin Paper</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>テキストバージョン(Textversion)</td>
<td>publisher</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

京都大学
Decline and Decline-Narratives in the Greek and Roman World
Wolfson College, Oxford  20-21 March 2017

Prospectus

When did the Greek poleis start to decline? How did the Roman Empire fall? These historical issues have been much studied in academic circles, and are also of great interest to the general public. This is the case not only in Europe, but also in Japan, a country far distant from the theatre of the decline and fall of the Greek poleis and ancient empires.

Since the latter half of the twentieth century, however, the models for the decline of the Greek and Roman worlds have been harshly criticised. Turning to documentary sources, historians have vigorously argued for the vitality of the Greek poleis in the Hellenistic and Imperial periods, while the historians of Late Antiquity, often focusing on religion and mentality, have redressed the issue of the decline of the Roman Empire by introducing the concept of long-term transformation. Further, regarding the latter, a new wave of declinists are striking back, stressing the significant impact of political events such as the ‘Germanic Migration’. Thus, we are still a long way from reaching any reasonable conclusion.

The aim of this conference is not to increase the complexity of decline-narratives, but to provide a meta-analysis of decline-narratives, ancient and modern. The conference will be divided into three parts. In the first part, we will address the issue of how modern and contemporary historians have discussed the decline of the Greek and Roman worlds, paying special attention to their methodology, and the political and social background of the decline-narratives. Returning to antiquity, the second part will deal with the ancient construction of decline-narratives; the main topics will include why and how the Greeks and Romans described their contemporary worlds as in decline, and what roles were played in each decline by the outsiders.

The third part of the conference will be concerned with comparative history. Through comparison of the decline-narratives of the Chinese empires and the Roman Empire, or discussion of how the archaeological models describe the ends of the most successful imperial projects in the ancient Mediterranean and the Ancient Near East, we will attempt to construct a trans-cultural history of decline-narratives in ancient empires. We will also compare the discourse of Republican and Imperial Rome in order to investigate the shape of decline-narratives.
[Monday 20 March]

2:00  Registration

2:30  Opening Remarks & Prospectus  Takashi Minamikawa (Kyoto University, Japan)

2:45  Part I: Past through Modern Perspectives
     Chair: Asako Kurihara (Osaka University, Japan)

2:45  Introduction to Part I  Asako Kurihara

2:50  Presentation 1  Takeo Hasegawa (Kamakura Women’s University, Japan)
     The Causes of Greek Decline Revisited: How Should We Consider Them in the 21st Century?

3:20  Presentation 2  Aneurin Ellis-Evans (University of Oxford, U.K.)
     Decline in the Historiography of the Hellenistic Period

3:50  Tea

4:10  Presentation 3  Richard Flower (University of Exeter, U.K.)
     The Place of Heresiology and Technical Literature in Narratives of Roman Decline

4:40  Comments  Bryan Ward-Perkins (University of Oxford, U.K.)

4:50  Discussion

6:00  Reception

---

[Tuesday 21 March]

9:00  Registration & Tea

9:30  Part II: Ancient Construction of Decline-Narratives
     Chair: Takuji Abe (Kyoto Prefectural University, Japan)

9:30  Introduction to Part II  Takuji Abe

9:35  Presentation 4  Kota Kishimoto (Japan Society for the Promotion of Science, Japan)
     Decline behind the Rise of Rome: Decline-Narrative of the Achaean Koinon

10:05  Presentation 5  Masahiro Nishimura (Ryukoku University, Japan)
     The Absence of ‘Decline’ in Late Roman Discourse
Presentation 6  Mischa Meier (University of Tübingen, Germany)
Decline against Decline: Two Examples of Dealing with the Idea of Decline in the 5th Century A.D.

Tea

Comments  Katherine Clarke (University of Oxford, U.K.)
Discussion

Lunch

Part III: Comparative Approaches
Chair: Takashi Fujii (Kwansei Gakuin University, Japan)

Introduction to Part III  Takashi Fujii

Presentation 7  John Weisweiler (University of Maryland, U.S.A.)
Time, Decline and the Shape of Roman Imperial Ideology

Presentation 8  Fuminori Inoue (Waseda University, Japan)
A Historiographical Study of the Fall of the Western Roman Empire and the Chinese Empire (Han, Wei and Jin)

Assyria, Persia, Macedon and Rome: the End of imperial Projects in Western Eurasia during the Iron Age

Tea

Comments  Charlotte Roueché (King’s College London, U.K.)
Discussion

Closing Remarks  Fergus Millar (University of Oxford, U.K.)

This conference is supported by the Japan Society for the Promotion of Science (= JSPS KAKENHI Grant Number 26284114) and Kyoto University.