The Kyoto Economic Review

(Formerly The Kyoto University Economic Review)

TOWARD A NEW DEVELOPMENT

To revive the innovative spirit of its founders, starting 2004, The Kyoto University Economic Review will become an open refereed journal and its name will be slightly altered to The Kyoto Economic Review (hereafter, KER). KER was founded in 1926 as the first Japanese economic journal in Western languages.

As of the beginning of 2004, KER will welcome contributions from researchers from both within and outside Kyoto University. It will remain a comprehensive journal covering economic theory, econometrics, applied economics, management sciences, economic history, and economic thought. KER aims not only to communicate the results of advanced economic analysis, but also promote the historical and philosophical perspectives in economic sciences. Furthermore, it will be ready to publish groundbreaking case studies of economic and administrative behavior, leading to new developments in economic analysis. We welcome submissions of original research articles from all over the world.

Instructions to Contributors

Editorial Policy

- The Kyoto Economic Review (hereafter, KER) is a comprehensive economic journal. “Economics” is understood here in a broader sense, covering economic theory, applied economics, statistics and econometrics, management sciences, experimental and simulation studies, economic history, and economic thought. In addition to original articles, it occasionally prints surveys, discussions of important topics, substantial review articles, guides for important reference materials, and summaries of interesting experiments/simulations. Submission proposals to the editors are welcomed, although no promises can be made before the final submission of the manuscript.
- KER is composed of both refereed (peer-reviewed) and non-refereed materials. For easy identification, the refereed articles include accepted date on the first page of each article. Non-refereed materials contain, in principle, contributed articles, conference reports, other articles or notes authorized by the editorial board, and so on.
- Papers submitted to KER must not have been published and must not be under consideration elsewhere. The contributors are fully responsible to ascertain that their contributions do not violate intellectual property rights or other proprietary rights of others, including, without limitation, copyright, trademark, patent, or trade secrets.
- Contributors are required to transfer all copyrights to KER, including the right to publish their contributions in any form and display electronic files on KER's web site and other repositories and databases with which KER affiliates. Contributors, however, reserve the right of reproduction, provided that they obtain prior written permission from KER.

Manuscript Submission

- Manuscript is accepted in English. Electronic submission is required via e-mail to the following address: ker-jimu@econ.kyoto-u.ac.jp. Please keep our reply e-mail to verify that you have submitted the manuscript.
- There is no standard length for articles, although it would be appropriate for submitted manuscript not to exceed 35 double-spaced pages including footnotes, tables and figures—approximately 15,000 words.
- The first round of review takes 2–3 months. After evaluating the manuscript, the editorial board will inform the editorial decision to the correspondence address. For revised manuscript, the review process takes 1–2 months.
